Dear Brigadier General Carl Strock,
Even though it is a good idea to help the salmon, there are good reasons not to breach the dams too. Some people could lose their jobs if you breach the dams. There might be floods too. Also you have already spent lots of money for the dams, and it will cost money to breach the dams too. Electric bills could go up. You would have to shut down PFI, and we get our paper from there. There would not be very many reservoirs, and those are fun places to boat and fish. Lewiston could not be a seaport if you did, and Lewiston is where we ship our supplies away. Shipping our supplies by truck costs more money.

Even if I am just a fourth grader I have an opinion too. My teacher Janice Johnson told us about this. I am glad she let us write to you and tell you our opinions.

Sincerely,
Sarah Nielsen
