

Continued

- Shallow water habitat and food source would be dried up, resulting in lower productivity for fall Chinook
- Juvenile Pacific lamprey, a species of growing concern, would most likely be dried up in shallow water areas during a drawdown if they exist there